

As the arrows indicate, the proximate goals are not mutually exclusive. Increased access control provides support for increased Motivation reinforcement; Increased surveillance serves to increase access control and motivation reinforcement; and increased activity support promotes increases in the other three.