

Plan view of a section of the top of a wall. A typical wall of this type may be constructed using “hit-and-miss” construction in which alternate panels are cast first and then the in-fills are cast between them.